

POTLATCH FUND

Inspiring the Native Tradition of Giving

HIRING ANNOUNCEMENT For an Executive Director

The Opportunity

The Executive Director (ED) is responsible for leading all aspects of Potlatch Fund's work. Working closely with the Board of Directors, the ED leads the organization in establishing a clear strategy to support the organization's mission. The ED is a thought leader across all areas of the organization's work and the lead advocate in fostering the vision, promoting goals and influencing others to take action. The ED is one of the organization's lead spokespeople, along with the Board of Directors. The ED is responsible for securing and sustaining the long-term future of our Native-led community foundation.

Externally, the ED cultivates, establishes and maintains funder and donor relationships while deepening strategic partnerships and relationships within the Native non-profit and philanthropic sectors. Internally, the ED works with the Board and committees to ensure the effective governance and long-term sustainability of the organization while applying a diversity, equity and inclusion lens to our work. The ED leads the staff in executing overall strategy and ensures successful operations, funding and accountability of all programs.

The ED is a passionate and enthusiastic advocate for Potlatch Fund and motivated by the opportunity to play a leading role strengthening Native communities, Native philanthropy and building bridges between funders and Native communities. The ED should be prepared to foster a culture where every member of the staff will feel a deep personal connection to the organization's work and work together to achieve our vision and values. The ideal ED will model the positive attributes needed to strengthen our organizational culture and is an inspired and dynamic leader who draws strength from the mission, values and vision of Potlatch Fund.

Our Mission

Potlatch Fund is a community foundation and leadership development organization. We are dedicated to our mission to expand philanthropy within Tribal Nations and Native Communities in the Northwest by inspiring and building upon the Native tradition of giving.

Among Northwest Coastal tribes, a potlatch is a coming together in ceremony, celebration and giving. Potlatches have always embodied the best of what Native culture had to offer: community building, food, song, and above all else, sharing. Today, the spirit of the potlatch – of philanthropy in its most traditional form – continues to thrive in every Native community.

To honor this traditional value of giving, Potlatch Fund was formed in 2002. We support Native people by sharing tools and resources needed to strengthen communities. We champion investment in our future leaders so they may serve others. We bring the realities of Native America to the philanthropic community. And we share the resources with those dedicated to keeping Native communities, arts and cultures alive.

What We Do

Potlatch Fund's model is based on serving needs, investing in Native communities, building bridges, advancing Native philanthropy, and strengthening community. To serve the needs of Native communities, Potlatch Fund works to build the capacity of Tribal institutions and leadership, to bring new philanthropic resources to these communities, and to administer direct grantmaking programs that benefit Native communities.

Real voices. Real change.

"Potlatch Fund gives small grants but their values are huge and far reaching, instead of just giving us a fish they are teaching us how to fish."

- Stevey Seymour, Colville Tribe
(Grantee & Cohort Graduate)

Despite the vast cultural wealth held by Native Americans, Native communities continue to be under-resourced and underserved at all levels, from education to the arts, from social services to basic community infrastructure. In other communities, the philanthropic sector – with its many private, corporate, family and community foundations – serves the invaluable role of addressing such disparities. These resources have yet to reach Indian Country.

According to the Foundation Center, Native Americans receive less than one percent of philanthropic dollars in the United States. Yet these communities continue to experience disproportionately high rates of poverty, unemployment and disease. At Potlatch Fund, we focus on promoting diversity, equity and inclusion within mainstream philanthropy.

Before colonization many Native communities lived a life of abundant wealth. The laws of the potlatch and Native society address redistribution of wealth and acts of reciprocity. It is Potlatch Fund's desire for Native communities to return to these ways.

We are a small team and we truly live within the work we do. We meet communities where they are at and take an asset-based approach to community development. We recognize and respect the sovereign status of Tribes and our role in supporting and complementing the work of Tribal governments and Tribal community initiatives. We honor Elders, children, and future generations and respect all peoples that we work with. We aim to honor, enrich, share and protect traditions, culture and the natural world. We also have a commitment to educate non-Native communities about Northwest Indian Country.

Ultimately, we work with Tribal leadership, Native communities, nonprofit leaders and Native artists to bring the idea that – with the help of philanthropic dollars – they can create their own destinies.

Our Programs

Since 2002, Potlatch Fund has distributed over 4 million dollars in grants. Through our Grantmaking Program we provide annual grants of $10,000 through five categories:

Community Building - supports organizations and community programs that impart values, histories and knowledge across generations to make our communities stronger and healthier. The well-being of individuals and community-based organizations is integral to the well-being of a community as a whole. This program seeks to build the capacity of individuals, organizations and communities.

Language Preservation - funds the development of language transfer systems - a groundbreaking approach to increasing fluency. Support is offered for: community language assessments, strategic plan development, and implementation of the plan.

Native Arts - seeks to lift up both traditional and contemporary projects working to strengthen Native art forms, practices and knowledge that develop a stronger sense of identity and cultural vitality of the community.

Healthy Pathways for Native Youth - supports initiatives that assist Native youth in their transformation from childhood to young adulthood by equipping them with culture, resilience, strength, and health and wellness.

Native Student Success - encourages organizational learning and building capacity for Tribal communities and Native-led nonprofits to develop local solutions for Native students. We are interested in the development, implementation and sharing of effective practices in community-determined project areas and achieving community-determined outcomes.

An integral part of Potlatch Fund's work is providing leadership and nonprofit management trainings to remove the barriers to nonprofit creation and success. This is achieved through the Capacity Building Program, which is comprised of our Grantmaking Program grantees. We offer intensive 10-month training sessions utilizing a cohort model that focuses on Nonprofit Management, Native Arts and Language Preservation.

The Capacity Building Program is about our people—empowering emerging leaders and developing sound strategies in nonprofit management—as well as fundraising and grant writing to increase organizational capacity of Native-led organizations. We know that increased nonprofit development catalyzes the expansion of philanthropy, which is our organization's mission.

Real voices. Real change.

“Potlatch Fund was the first grant I wrote for myself and it felt really empowering. To be like, yes we will invest in you, you are valuable, and we can help you on your journey.”
